Local Author Info Sheet — Bookstore Stocking

AI for Boomers

A Funny, Plain-English Guide for People Who Remember Rotary Phones

Tyler Redshaw
Vienna, VA local author · Levered Press

Specs

- Format: 6 × 9 in paperback
- Pages: 134 · Interior: black & white
- List price: $14.99
- ISBN: 979-8-234-29646-7 (paperback, Ingram edition)
- Availability: Ingram (via IngramSpark), standard industry discount, no consignment
- Publisher imprint: Levered Press

About the book

Your grandkids use AI. Now it's your turn (and you'll probably be better at it). If you learned to drive without power steering and program a VCR, you can absolutely learn AI. This easy-to-read, laugh-out-loud guide shows you exactly what to tap and exactly what to type, one simple step at a time.

- Turn three eggs and a lonely zucchini into dinner
- Write a birthday toast that makes the whole table cry (the good kind)
- Catch scammers who fake a grandchild's voice
- Get ready for doctor visits, plan trips, and fix old photos
- Keep your private information private

No jargon. No condescension. Just big type, plain English, and a "Try It Now" box and tear-out cheat sheet in every chapter.

Audience & gift angle

Adult readers who remember rotary phones, and adult children looking for a practical, funny gift for a parent who still calls the TV remote "the clicker." Humor targets technology and robots — not older readers.

Ordering

Available to order through Ingram at a standard industry discount (no consignment). Search Ingram by ISBN 979-8-234-29646-7, title, or author Tyler Redshaw.
Bards Alley Bookshop (110 Church St NW, Vienna, VA 22180) — indie / self-published stocking and event requests: https://www.bardsalley.com/authors.html

Author contact

Tyler Redshaw · Vienna, VA
Email: redshawtj@gmail.com
Phone: (804) 516-0985